

The Song of Travel

Two artists one journey

Travelling these days has a lot of challenges. Packing light, especially if you're an artist, how much to take, what to leave behind. The distances don't get easier and the crowds of fellow travellers only seem to get larger. But when I arrived at the far western tip of England last August, I was utterly seduced by Cornwall's beauty and magic and every mile travelled was worth it. And so too with New Zealand's Lake Tekapo, Love's Creek in the Northern Territory, the vibrant colours of tiny Lord Howe Island and the seductive light of Umbria and Sicily. Travel changes me and I think that's only natural, it should do. It opens my eyes, makes me accept and it leaves marks on my memory as well as the marks I make on paper.

Painting in Sally and John's olive groves, Montecchio, Umbria, Italy. August 2019.
